DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

This stone house is a two story, three bay L-shaped structure. It is built of roughly coursed native granular stone. The front section of the house is dated 1892 and was built by the present owner's grandfather. Evidence is present of a porch which once extended along much of the front elevation. Long, flat pieces of stone form lintels for the doors and windows. The rear section is said to be older but has been thoroughly altered.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

This house is an example of native stone construction in the Pleasant Valley. Apparently building with stone was popular there during the last quarter of the 19th century unlike the main valley in Washington County where post 1850 stone construction is rare.
